Computer Programs Developed:

Karpowitz, D. H. (1990, 2000, 2005). Two Computer programs for the administration, scoring and interpretation of the MMPI-2, for Macintosh and Windows operating systems respectively. The programs are written in Real Basic for the Macintosh and PC. The program for the Macintosh has doubled in size in 2000 with three important new features: 1) computerized administration, 2) research database collection occurs automatically and 3) Interpretation for the client as well as the clinician.

The PC version was updated in 2005 and also includes: 1) computerized administration, Computer programs now in professional use: 2) research database collection occurs automatically and 3) Interpretation for the client as well as the clinician.

Karpowitz, D. H. (2006). Program to administer, score and interpret the Myers-Briggs Personality Type Inventory. This program is written using Microsoft Access and can be adapted to many other objective tests. A person may take the questionnaire with the help of the computer or using the booklet and data form. If the test is administered by computer, it is automatically scored and interpreted. If the questionnaire is administered using paper and pencil, the data can be quickly entered into the computer for scoring and interpretation. Data may be stored for research purposes also.
